

Extroverts - students who engage in frequent interactions with other students - generally report higher belonging. However, the quality of interactions also matters, particularly for introverted students.

